College Corner Middlebury College (Middlebury, Vermont)

Middlebury is a unique school—a classic liberal arts college that also offers graduate and specialized programs that operate around the world. Middlebury is committed to educating students in the tradition of the liberal arts, which embodies a method of discourse as well as a group of disciplines, and in scientifically and mathematically-oriented majors, just as in the humanities, the social sciences, the arts, and the languages. Middlebury emphasizes reflection, discussion, and intensive interactions between students and faculty members. The vibrant residential community, remarkable facilities, and the diversity of co-curricular activities and support services all exist primarily to serve these educational purposes.

Graduates are expected to be thoughtful and ethical leaders able to meet the challenges of informed citizenship both in their communities and as world citizens. They should be independent thinkers committed to service with the courage to follow their convictions and to accept responsibility for their actions. Middlebury graduates should be physically active, mentally disciplined, and motivated to continue learning. Most importantly, they should be both grounded in an understanding of the Western intellectual tradition that has shaped the college, and educated so as to comprehend and appreciate cultures, ideas, societies, traditions, and values that may be less immediately familiar to them.

In addition to strong programs and facilities in the sciences, Middlebury also has a nationally recognized Environmental Studies program.
